

THE USF should NOT be assessed based on available/provided bandwidth. This would directly punish those who have innovated in and improved the state of the art in communications technology.

Moreover, it would set a precedent that could, at a later date, be expanded to cover those who use other communications services, such as the Ham bands, CB, FRS, etc.

Sincerely,

Vincent J. Stoneking